WEATHER OF CONCERN

Northern California

- Flash Flood Watch in effect from Wednesday afternoon through Friday for the Camp Fire in Butte County, the Carr, Delta and Hirz Fires in Shasta County, and the Mendocino Complex in Lake County burn areas.
 - Flash floods and debris flows will be a particular threat in the wildfire burn areas mentioned above.
 - Heavy rainfall at times is possible over the burn areas.
 - Newly burned areas will likely see ash flows from moderate rain.
- Increased visibility in the Bay Area represents a light improvement in air quality that will continue to slowly improve through today.
 - Rain and gusty winds will assist in improving air quality late tonight and Wednesday.

Southern California

- Potential for rockslides/mudslides and minor debris flows near recent burn areas Wednesday afternoon through early Thursday morning.
 - Estimated storm totals: 0.20-0.70 inches.
 - Rockslides/mudslides will likely affect locations in the Woolsey and Hill burn areas especially Hwy. 1 and canyon roads.
 - Expect significant travel delays with potential road closures.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

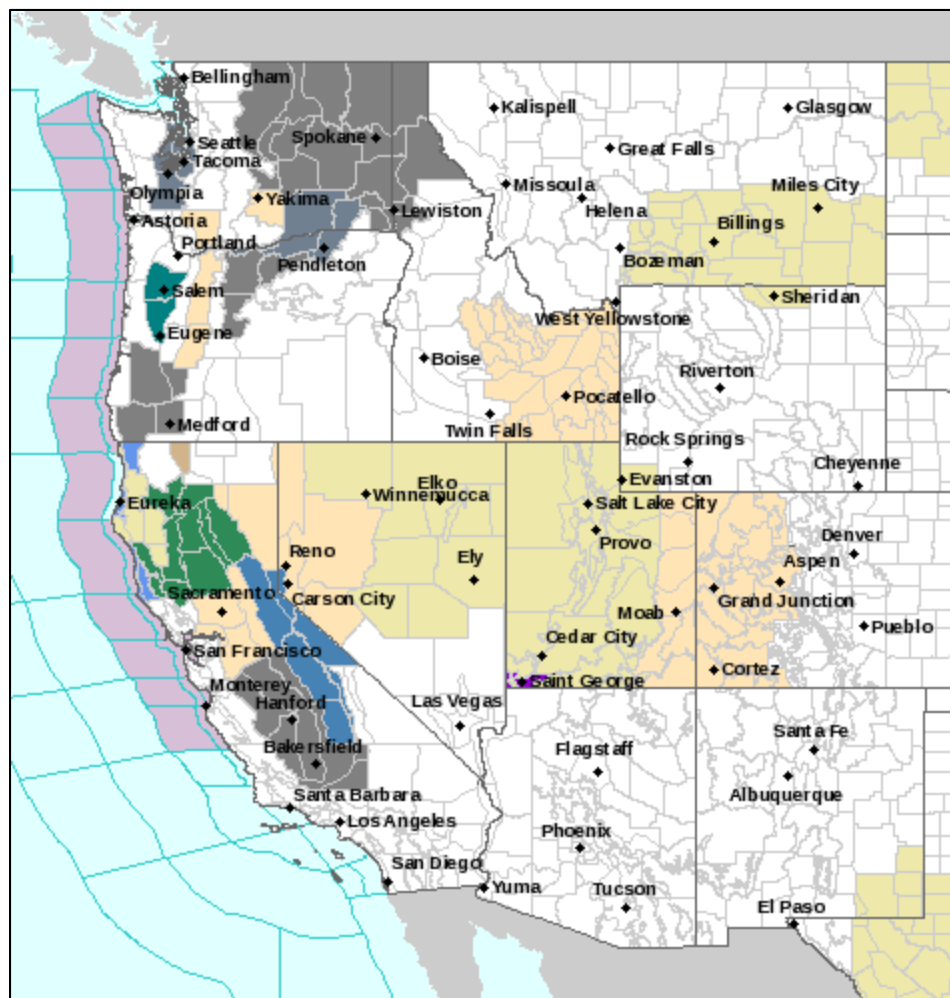

- Very dry conditions continue today with a sudden change to rather moist conditions Wednesday into Thanksgiving weekend.
- Heavy precipitation at times in fire scar areas could create debris flows
- Warm, dry conditions will continue today before a series of wet weather systems arrives.
- Locally heavy rain or snow at higher elevations (mostly 5500 ft +) is expected, particularly Thursday and Friday, and could lead to some debris flow conditions in this year's fire scar areas.
- A few areas of E winds with gusts to as much as around 35 mph and lower Relative Humidity (RH) around 25-35% will remain along the western slopes and drainages of the Cascades and Sierra tonight before ending mid morning today.
- Gusty southerly winds expected to develop this afternoon and overnight ahead of the incoming weather system/precipitation could be accompanied by some low RH in favored areas, especially the Shasta Valley.
- Afternoon minimum RH's will remain fairly low (12-18%) today then likely be over 50% or higher by Wednesday afternoon in most locations and remaining no lower than around 40% during the drier spells through next week.
- Afternoon high temperatures will remain 5-10 degrees above normal until Wednesday when they will cool to near or below seasonal normals. The warmest inland locations will have afternoon highs in the lower and mid 50s Wednesday into the weekend.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

- A weak ridge of high pressure will sit over the West Coast today. A couple of Pacific troughs will move into the West Coast from the Gulf of Alaska Wednesday through the end of this week. The first trough will be stronger and dig further south than the second trough. A weak ridge of high pressure will build into California from the Pacific Ocean this weekend.
- Maximum temperatures will be near normal through today, with 50s to low 60s across the mountains and mid 60s to mid 70s in the valleys.
- Minimum humidity will be mainly in the teens away from the coastal areas today.
- Winds will be light today.
- Temperatures will cool to 5 to 10 degrees below normal Wednesday through Friday.
- Showers will develop over the northern parts of Central California starting Wednesday morning and then spread south into Southern California by Wednesday evening. These showers will persist through Thursday afternoon.
- Most locations will receive between a quarter inch and an inch of rainfall Wednesday and Thursday.
- Scattered showers will persist from a Monterey/Fresno County line northward Thursday evening through Friday night with up to an additional half inch of rainfall.
- The snow level will be between 6,000 and 7,000 feet.
- South winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the wind prone mountain and desert areas Wednesday and then become westerly with the same speeds Thursday and Friday.
- Temperatures will warm and humidity will become low this weekend.
